Copyrighted 1889, by the New York Associated Pres Bealin, Dec. 28.—Prince Bismarck is under the weather, but he is apparently not one of the victims of influenza. His condition does not occasion any alarm, but he is ill enough to compel him to give up almost entirely the effort to transact official business and to prevent his presence at court on New Years day. His doctors oppose his desire to appear in the reich-stag and take part in the debate on the socialist law or the military credits, or any subject likely to irritate him.

On Christmas eve there was assembled in the new palace only the prince and Princess Leopoid of Prussia. The duke and duchess of Saxemeiningen are at Potsdam, but the iliness of Princess Feodora, their only child, prevented their attending the family party. Each one of the emperor's five sons had a large Christmas tree all for himself placed on a table in the shell hall, the tree of the emperor and empress being on another table in the center of the hall. The emperor passed the greater part of Christmas eve assisting in the decoration of the trees and frolicking with the children and left the party to go to Barnay's revival of "Hamlet." On Christmas eve there was assembled of honor, attended the empress, and Count Messelerode, assisted by Baron Von Eude, made the presentation. The empress, in course of a cordial conversation with Mr. Phelps, expressed her life-long interest in American affairs and her great desire that the people of the United States should use their immense resources always in the interest of the peac of the world.

An exceedingly interesting discussion is carried on in private life everywhere and not without much heat over a case just made by a queer proceeding of the emperor in remitting a fine of 400 marks inflicted upon an editor by the courts. Dr. Dachter, the editor of the Staats Burger Zeitung, a conservative sheet, libelled Herr Singor, a socialist member of the reichstag. It attacked him very vigorously, not for his bad singing, but because he posed publicly as a socialist and a friend of the people, while in fact he is the head of a factory for making woman's cleaks and similar garments, in which the "sweating" system is practiced at the evpense of many girls employed by him. Singor appealed to the courts, the editor was condemned and paid his fine in August. This fine was returned by the emperor on Monday last. Hitherto the exercise of royal clemency has been restricted to state cases. For the emperor to thus interfere and stand between justice and an accused person in a mere case of private interest in an ordinary violation of one man's rights by

SAID HE WAS JOHN L'S BROTHER.

Clampett in New Zealar

The little town of Christ Church, New Zealand, has just getten over the heat of a great religious scamial. John L. Sullivan's Christian brother has come and gone. He who created such a furore as a preacher, he who was the lien of the hour, has been pulled who was the lion of the hour, has been pulled down from his pedestal of piety, and has ignominiously alsoped. Some time ago a great revivalist made his appearance in the town. He was a man of rough yet not unpleasing address. He represented himself as a reformed dinner, a tough who had been reared in the slums of Boston, but snatched from the lowest rung of the ladder of vice and brought into the church. He talked as if the fullness of true religion that swelled within him must get out or sometaing would burst.

After having been in town a few days, he announced himself to be a full blood brother of Jehn L. Sullivan, the champion pugilist of the world. He called himself George T. Sullivan, and had been a pugilist himself, so he said. Whithy and women had taken even that means of gatning a livelihood from him. He was not totally deprayed; he might have redeemed himself and remained in Boston, had not fate interposed her iron will. A young heiress of Beacon Hill full in leve with him, and the result was an elopement. Alse! for the troay of fate, they were caught. To save soundal, her parents gave him $25,000 in guld and told him to clear out. He did so. For the negt two years he led a gay life, gambling and dissipating, now at Monaco, now in England, flitting from place to place. After his money was spent he led a fearful existence. He, in his own words, "rude on the badk of the devil." own words, "rude on the back of the devil."
This was his story, and he told it well. In proof of his tale, he showed pictures of himself, in prize ring contume, stripped to the

for an outraged community to stand, and they turned on masse on the imposter. The true story of this interesting person is as follows: Arthur G. Clampett went to Australia with Clarence Whistler, the wrestler, now dead. Clampett represented himself as a champion ewimmer and gave around pictures of himself in a rubber suit. He had a Zealand. At one time he saug in a church choir; again he was a peripate athletics; now he was a circus clown, anon a school teacher—a veritable Jack of all trades. Sullivan was certainly a very impressive speaker. People would go to hear him out of curiosity and leave profoundly impressed with his ability and apparent genuineness and sincerity. He worked on the creduity of the people. He followed out the advice of a well known circus man. "If the public with a leave to the second of the second out the second o known circus man, "If the public wish to be humbugged, go ahead and humbug them."

In Love With Himself.

At all stages in the world's history there have been no limits to the credulity of those who seek for a specific against the ravages of time. No line can be drawn between the sexes in these cases. A London Times writer, speaking of Germany's "beauty bath," says: "A ramark made by a vain old man has chiefly helped to make Schlangenbad famous. The speaker was an ejderly Frenchman, and he said that bething in the water there readered him in love with himself. Since this phrase was uttered by the Frenchman, and repeated by Sir Francis Head, who in his old age scught relief at Schlangenbad, the old age sought relief at Schlange of male visitors has not fallen far

Nervous Prostration,

S Oprevalent, especially among women, results from overtaxing the system. The assimilative organs becoming de-ranged, the blood grows weak and impoverished, and hence "that tired feeling" of which many complain. For all such cases, there is no remedy equal to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Take no other.

"Some time ago I found my system entirely run down. I had a feeling of constant fatigue and languor and very little ambition for any kind of effort. "Hold on!" said the father, "I heard you well enough the first time." A somewhat similar story is told of Sir Richard Steele, who, when he was preparing a room in York buildings, Lendon, for public orations, happened to be a good deal behind in his payments to his werkmen. Com-ing one day into the hall to see what progress was made, Steele ordered the carpenter to get into the rostrum and make a speech in order The carpener mounted the stage, and, scratching his head, told Sir Richard that he did not know what to say. "Tur no crater,

"Oh, no matter," said Steele; "sny the first thing that comes uppermost in your head."
"Why, then, Bir Richard," said the man, "here we have been working for your honor these six months, and cannot get a penny of our money. Pray, sir, when do you

"That will do that will do!" said Stoole "You may come down. I heard you quite distinctly, but I didn't like your subject."-Youth's Companion.

An extraordinary affair has occurred at Maryport. A few days ago the wife of a laborer in the town gave birth to a son. When the child was born it was found that its head was covered with a veil or caul. The veil was placed on one side and no actice was taken of it until some hours after the child's birth. When examined, however, it was found that the words "British and For eign Eible Society" were deeply impressed upon the veil. When this discovery was ie the greatest excitement prevail the neighborhood, some of the woman de-claring that nothing short of a miracio had been enacted. The doctor, who inquired into the matter, however, soon explained the affair. The vell, while in a pliable condition. had been placed upon a Bible, on the cover of which the words "British and Foreign words were in this way transferred to the well, but some of the inhabitants still ascribe the affair to supernatural influence, and de-clare that the child is a "missionary born."— Leeds Mercury.

A VETERAN.

I was wounded in the leg at the battle of Stone River, Dec. 31st, 1862. My blood was potsoned from the effects of the wound, and the leg swelled to double its natural size, and remained so for many years. The potson extended to my whole system and I suffered a thousand deaths. Nothing did me any good until I took Swift's Specific, which took the poison out of my system, and enabled me to food myself a man again. S. S. S. is the remedy for blood poison.
